

Haley Hintz

she/her

Volunteer

Haley is a second-year graduate student in the Clinical Psychology PsyD program at Eastern Kentucky University. She graduated from the University of Kentucky with degrees in Psychology and Political Science in 2021. She is passionate about her clinical work and enjoys working with children and adolescents who have experienced trauma, are suicidal, and who are autistic. Her research interests are broadly focused on improving and better understanding the utility of common psychodiagnostic assessment measures on populations of autistic children. Her continued goals within the field include improving access to mental healthcare through legislative advocacy and using outreach efforts to prevent trauma and suicide. Outside of academia, Haley enjoys attending live music events, cycling, and spending time with loved ones.
