

Safiyah Sadek

she/her

Undergraduate Representative &
Communications Coordinator

Safiyah is a fourth-year undergraduate student at the University of Kentucky located in Lexington. She is an Egyptian-American Muslim that continuously seeks to understand the diverse experience and provide a space to help undergraduates develop a strong foundation as students in academia. Safiyah is a Neuroscience major and a psychology minor on the premed track working towards an MD/PhD. Her research and clinical topics of interest include mental health help seeking among college populations in the context of substance use and addiction and the study of neurobehavioral mechanisms of substance use, particularly opioids. Outside of academia, she is very involved in multiple interest groups including the Korean Language and Culture Club (KLCC), the Collective of Fine Artists and Scientists (CFAS), and NeuroCATS. In addition to being a member in these organizations, she has been or currently is on their executive boards as secretary, treasurer, vice president, and/or president. She is also involved in volunteering at my local campus kitchen and Ronald McDonald House as well as online advocacy and awareness of substance use disorder.

Email: ssa364@uky.edu

Instagram: @neuropatra

@substance.use.awareness